Understanding Your Health Record and Personal Health Information

Each time you, or someone else on your behalf, orders supplies from us and we submit a claim for payment, a medical record is made. Typically, this record contains a list of your supplies, a prescription for your supplies, and your name, address, phone number, date of birth, social security number, insurance information, evaluations, test results, diagnoses, and prognoses.

This information, often referred to as your health or medical record, serves as a:

- Basis for planning your care and treatment
- Means of communication among the many health professionals who contribute to your care
- Legal document describing the services you received
- Means by which you or a third-party payer can verify that services billed were actually ordered and provided
- Source of information for public health officials charged with improving the health of the nation
- Source of data for facility planning and marketing
- Tool with which we can assess and continually work to improve the service we render and the outcomes we achieve

Understanding what is in your record and how your health information is used, helps you to:

- Ensure its accuracy
- Better understand who, what, when, where, and why others may access your health information
- Make more informed decisions when authorizing disclosure to others

Examples of Disclosures for Treatment, Payment, and Health Operations

The following categories describe the ways we may use and disclose your health information, except where prohibited by federal or state laws that require special privacy protections.

Treatment

We may use health information about you to provide you with medical treatment or services. We may disclose health information about you to doctors, nurses, technicians, office staff, or other personnel who are involved in your care or health care decisions.

For example: Information provided by your physician or other member of your health care team will be recorded in your record and used to determine the supplies or services that should work best for you. We may provide your physician or a subsequent health care provider with copies of health information that should assist him or her in making decisions regarding your care. We routinely make out-bound calls to coordinate the health care services we provide to you. We may contact you to verify your order, to inform you of any issues relating to your order or services requested, confirm receipt & delivery of supplies, to remind you of the need to re-order supplies, and communicate potential product recalls.

Payment

We may use and disclose health information about you so that the treatment and services we provide to you may be billed to and payment may be collected from you, an insurance company or a third party.

For example: A bill may be sent to you or a third party payer. The bill may include information that identifies you, your diagnosis, procedures, and supplies used.

We may also disclose your health information to other health care providers or HIPAA covered entities who may need it for their payment activities.

Health care operations

We may use and disclose health information about you in order to run our business and make sure that you and our other customers receive quality care. We also may contact you as part of our efforts to assess and continually work to improve the services we render and the outcomes we achieve.

For example: We may contact you to assure the quality of our service. We may use or disclose your information to conduct cost-management and business planning activities for our company.

We may also disclose your health information to other HIPAA covered entities that have provided services to you so that they can improve the quality and effectiveness of the health care services that they provide. We may use your health information to create de-identified data, which is stripped of your identifiable data and no longer identifies you.
